Drunkenness In France Increasing.

Drunkenness in France is steadily on the increase, and there is not a village, however small, which does not possess several habitual drunkards.

Alcoholism is the modern lapsoy of France. Medical statistics, compiled by the authorities from the hospitals, asylums and prisons, show that the great increase in pulmonary consumption is almost entirely due to alcoholism, and two thirds of the inmates of French lunatic asylums are there from the same cause.

Throughout France there is a great demand for cheap absinthe, which is adulterated with diacetate of copper.

The effect of this beverage, if taken regularly, is to drive the drinker insane.

Common spirits, generally known as "eau de vie," is consumed in large quantities in the north of France.

This liquor can be bought at 15 cents per pint. Such cheapness is a great incentive to drunkenness.

Various public bodies are doing their utmost to bring home to the people the awful physical ravages caused by alcohol excess, but hitherto their endeavors have produced the effect of a rain-drop on a furnace.

The efforts of temperance societies based on philanthropic or religious principles have no influence on the French character.

The only real remedy for checking the alcoholism curse in France lies in prohibitory legislation and the creation of a State monopoly of alcohol.

This would mean that pure alcohol only would be served, and that at a high price.

AFTER more than four hours' deliberation the jury in the Caleb Powers case at Georgetown returned a verdict at 11:20 o'clock Saturday morning finding the prisoner guilty and fixing the punishment at death. In the afternoon a formal motion for a new trial was made and overruled. Special Judge Robbins sentenced Powers to be hanged on Wednesday, November 25. An appeal was granted and the defense was given until the eighth day of the October term of the Scott Circuit Court to file a bill of exceptions. This suspends the sentence pending a decision of the appeal. The verdict is a thoroughly satisfactory one to all lovers of justice and especially to those who do not sanction assassination and who believe that every man who figured in the damnable plot of murdering Gov. William Goebel should feel the balter draw. The republican and flop over papers are sending up a mighty howl at the thought of their especial pet dangling at the rope's end but such stuff will cut no figure and Powers will pay all of the fearful debt he can ere many months come and go. The trial was the third to which Powers was subjected. On the first he was given life imprisonment. The case was taken to the court of appeals and was reversed. The verdict in the second trial was also life imprisonment. The court of appeals again came to Powers' rescue by reversing the lower court and granting him a new trial.

THE effort of the Printers' Union to run the government printing office at Washington having resulted in much trouble, an order has been issued that no man shall be retained in the service who does not take an oath of allegiance to the government. It is a rather sweeping order, but a man who thinks he owes more to a union than he does to his government or his employer, is not a safe one to have around.

BISHOP H. C. MORRISON struck the nail squarely on its head when he said: 'When Negroes quit ravishing we will quit lynching and not before. If the newspapers of the country would give us much space to the horrible crime which invariably precedes all lynchings as they do to the tales of lynching, it would serve to place sympathy where it belongs.'

THE Lexington Democrat is coming like a whirlwind. It added over 500 subscribers last week, about as many as the combined circulation of its republican competitors, the Herald and Leader. You can't keep a good man and a good thing down.

Senator Blackburn will be one of the speakers at the opening of the democratic campaign at Winchester Sept. 5.

WHEN Fugitive Taylor was asked what he thought of the verdict in the Caleb Powers case, he said: "I am horrified, simply horrified. When it is remembered that Caleb Powers has been convicted for political purposes, and to cover and obscure the monstrous crime of robbing him of his office by the use of the $100,000 perjury fund and then by indicting and bribing with impunity the money-craving creatures to swear his life away in three bitter partisan courts before three packed partisan juries, deliberately selected to convict, no one is surprised. His conviction is the most diabolical political crime of the age. The verdict does not in fact, nor in the minds of just men anywhere, make him any more guilty than did the conviction and execution of Robert Emmet make him guilty. Caleb Powers is an innocent man." Pretty big talk for a fellow who sneaked out from a State that had honored him and who is afraid to leave Durbin's arms even for a minute. It is getting close to Powers' fellow conspirator and we do not wonder that he is "horrified." He realizes that it may be his time next and no doubt feels that it ought to be.

UNDER a good picture of Hon. Harvey Helm, Lincoln county's candidate for Congress, the Mt. Vernon Signal says: "If we were to search the district over, we could not find a better man for the place, than Hon. Harvey Helm, of Stanford, and from the present outlook it would be useless to look elsewhere, for he is a sure winner." Since his announcement, we have not seen an Eighth district democrat who is not for him." In another place the paper says: "The Signal was the first paper in the district to mention the name of the Hon. Harvey Helm for Congress, and when the finish comes whether he is successful or not, it will still be found fighting for him. There are several reasons why we favor Mr. Helm for Congress, and at the proper time we will so state them. We say Helm first, last and all the time."

Most any girl, however, can get married, but few there be who can be sculptors.

A College Education In The Science Of Mechanical and Electrical Engineering.

Lexington is widely known as the center of the Blue Grass region of Kentucky. It should be as well and as widely known as the educational center of Kentucky, for it is pre-eminent in its institutions of learning and its facilities for education.

The Agricultural and Mechanical College of Kentucky, or as it is better known throughout the Commonwealth, the State College, is the best endowed of these institutions, and in the State College there was organized 12 years ago, a department of mechanical engineering, the purpose of which was to give practical as well as theoretical training in what is broadly known as mechanical engineering, to give that training necessary to fit men to be operators and designers of steam machinery and manufacturing plants. To mechanical engineering are allied chemical and electrical engineering, the province of the former is to instruct in the knowledge necessary for the operation of iron and steel plants and the analysis of iron and steel and refractory substances, and in electrical engineering is taught the theory and design and how to build and operate dynamos and motors.

The course of study in mechanical engineering at the State College extends over a period of four years, and the theoretical work of this course consists in a thorough training in English, Chemistry, Mathematics, Physics and Drawing. The last two years of the course are largely devoted to applying the principles of machine design and the careful solution of practical problems, thus familiarizing the student, through practical work, with the duties that shall be his on leaving college and entering upon the work which is to-day of supreme importance in the industrial affairs of the world and in which fame, wealth and position are the reward of industry and application.

But a few years ago the Polytechnic Institute of Troy, New York, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston were the only institutions in this country where thorough technical education could be had, and the expense attendant upon a technical training in either of these institutions was absolutely prohibitory to young Kentuckians and to young men throughout the Southern States.

The immense progress made in manufacturing in the United States has entailed the necessity of such a large number of skilled engineers that it has been and thus far is impossible for all the schools of engineering in the country to supply the demand for mechanical engineers. With full knowledge of that fact, the State College of Kentucky projected the equipment of the experimental laboratory of the mechanical engineering department and it is the best equipped laboratory in the South.

It is almost impossible to supply the demand for skilled engineers who are graduates of schools of mechanical engineering, and since electricity has been harnessed to man's uses and new modes of its application in engineering are being constantly discovered, those students whose attainments and proficiency are properly attested by the officers of reputable polytechnic schools, secure positions before the close of the last term. Not only have remunerative positions been secured for all the graduates of the State College, but as each student has very naturally shown a greater capacity in some special feature of the engineering course than in others, the college authorities have secured for him on graduation, a position in that line of work in which he excelled as a student, and in which his advancement would naturally be most rapid and certain. There is a world of meaning in the fact that every man who graduates from the Department of Mechanical Engineering of the State College of Kentucky has awaiting him a salaried position. The State College is in constant communication with superintendents or officers of great number of manufacturing plants throughout the United States, and there are not enough young men graduated in the engineering departments to fill the demands made upon this institution for skilled engineers. The climate of Central Kentucky and the healthfulness of Lexington are proverbial and the social influences exerted upon students are most elevating.

The engineer of today, the man who is capable of superintending some department of a great factory is, as a class, not developed from the brighter portions of the laboring element, which has had no opportunity for a comprehensive training, but is sought for in and taken from the educated class, and it is of nearly as great importance for the control of men under him that he should be a broad minded, cultivated man as that he should be well grounded in and have a proper understanding of the various branches of mechanical engineering.

In this broad and careful instruction the Department of Mechanical Engineering of the State College is pre-eminent among like institutions of the South.

To the residents of Kentucky the School of Mechanical and Electrical Engineering of the State College offers a full four years' course in the several branches of dynamic engineering practically free of cost, and it would be well for any young man contemplating an engineering career to correspond with the State College for information relative to conditions of admission.
